New York, June 13—(AP)—Charles Lindbergh came back today to the city he left on his great adventure, the first non-stop flight ever made from New York to Paris. He stepped from the city tug Macom at the Battery at 1:20 p. m., after being brought up the bay from Quarantine where he had landed in an amphibian plane after a flight from Washington via Mitchell Field.

As soon as word was received that Lindbergh was expected at the Battery within half an hour, the welcome parade was started up town.

Great Welcome Parade
Behind Major General William N. Haskell and his staff were bronzed regular army troops from Fort Hancock. Then came two companies of Marines and four of blue jackets from the battle ship Colorado. Behind these were units of the national guard, naval militia, reserve officers and veterans organizations.

Behind the soldiers and sailors came floats bearing floral models of Lindbergh's plane, The Spirit of St. Louis, of the Eiffel Tower and the Statue of Liberty and girls representing France and America.

As the procession progressed, it was greeted by thunderous cheers from the crowds that were jammed along the sidewalks, perched on window sills and leaning from thousands of windows.

As the vanguard of the parade reached City Hall, Mayor Walker and other city officials took their places in the pagoda arranged for the presentation of the city medal to Lindbergh.

Showed His Daring.
Lindbergh's arrival ended the flyer's first air journey since his return to America and a journey which might have proved disastrous but for his daring and skill. After taking to the air from Washington, he had to turn on his auxiliary tank, which contained just enough gas to carry him 300 miles. Undaunted by this contingency, Lindbergh continued and landed at Mitchell Field with the auxiliary tank almost dry.

Police said that the crowds to welcome Lindbergh were the greatest that had ever gathered in this city for any reason.

After a greeting from 50,000 throats at the Battery, that shook the city and a triumphal march up Broadway through close packed acclaiming crowds and a paper snowstorm from the windows of the craning skyscrapers, the young flyer arrived at City Hall at 2:00 p. m., this afternoon.

Woman and Two Would-be Rescuers Drowned
Glasgow, Scotland, June 13—(AP)—Mrs. Louise Traynor, whose home was in the United States, and two sailors who heroically tried to rescue her were drowned shortly after noon Saturday 600 miles from Ireland when Mrs. Traynor fell overboard from the steamship California.

Details were filed only meagerly in a wireless dispatch received today. Seamen Gilchrist and Isaac jumped into the sea to rescue her, but before a boat could be lowered, all had disappeared.

Crowded Ferry Boats in Collision: None Hurt
New York, June 13—(AP)—The municipal ferry boats Bronx and Julius Miller collided off the Battery this morning. Both vessels were filled with crowds for the Lindbergh reception, but no one was injured.

BOARDED UP WINDOWS ON LINE OF LINDBERGH PARADE TODAY IN NEW YORK AS PRECAUTION

New York, June 13—(AP)—The buildings of Broadway were put in splints today lest they get their ribs cracked in the boisterous welcome to Charles Lindbergh.

Beginning with the International Mercantile Marine Building at Broadway and the Battery and extending all the way up to City Hall, the windows of the financial district's buildings were boarded, fenced or wired against the impending crush of the young airman's admirers.

The boarding of windows was the revival of an old election day custom, which has fallen into disuse in recent years. For no welcome celebration in many years has such a precaution been deemed necessary.

WILL SEEK HERO'S MEDAL FOR STERLING LAD WHO DROWNED IN EFFORT TO SAVE HIS BROTHER

Body of Second Victim of Tragedy Found Sunday Morning

The body of Lawrence Rakow, twelve-year-old Sterling lad, who, according to the verdict of a coroner's jury gave his life "in a heroic attempt to save his younger brother Charles, after having rescued another brother, Warren, from death in Rock River on Sunday, May 29," was found lodged beneath a log on the edge of the island just west of Avenue G bridge in Sterling yesterday morning—just two weeks after the tragedy which resulted from the three boys going through the gates of the government dam at Sterling in a flat-bottomed boat which got out of Lawrence's control.

The verdict of the coroner's jury, emphasizing the little victim's heroism, is expected to be the opening wedge of a movement to acquire for him posthumous recognition from the Carnegie Foundation.

His body, in a terrible state of decomposition, was discovered by two Sterling boys, Eugene Snow and Leslie Wiker, who were fishing from a scow west of the bridge and the authorities were at once notified.

Plan Double Funeral.
Double funeral services for Lawrence and his younger brother, Charles, whose body was found a week ago yesterday—at which time it was placed in a hermetically sealed coffin so that it might be kept—will be held Tuesday morning at St. Mary's Catholic church in Sterling.

Readers of The Telegraph will recall that the three boys, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rakow, in disobedience of their parents, had taken the oars of the father's boat from their hiding place under the porch at the home on the Sunday before Memorial Day; went across the river to play on the sandy bank; and how, when the pull back across the river became too much for Lawrence's tired little arms, the boat had drifted down the river and through the gates of the government dam; how Lawrence grasped Warren, aged 6 and undersized, and placed him on the overturned boat, with the admonition to "hang on," and how he had then turned back in a futile attempt to rescue Charles, aged 5.

OHIO, 5; WALTON, 3.
The Walton baseball team lost of Ohio in a warmly contested game in Ohio Sunday afternoon by a score of 5 to 3. Miller and Faley formed the battery for Ohio while Bushman and Phalen performed for Walton.

The feature of the game was the continued wrangling on the part of both teams with the decisions of the umpire.

The Stars and Stripes flew everywhere and buildings were hung with great streamers screaming a welcome in colored ink to the hero of the day.

Fifth Avenue, one of the world's greatest thoroughfares, had to some extent followed Broadway's lead in boarding windows but the majority there trusted to the wider street and sidewalks to save their plate glass from the crush.

The streets were filled with men, women and children carrying camp stools, newspapers, mats, anything for a seat.

In the early morning the sky was overcast and a chill breeze swept the island but toward 8 o'clock a warm island sun smiled over the city.

DIXON OFFICERS
AID IN HUNTING
ESCAPED FELONHighway Robber Leaped
from Train at Sterling Sunday

Seven Lee county deputy sheriffs and Chief of Police Van Bibber assisted in the search for a prisoner who escaped from a Northwestern passenger train Sunday afternoon at Sterling, in which hunt Sterling policemen were finally successful when the fugitive was found along the river bank at the foot of Sixth avenue in Sterling.

The prisoner, Thomas L. Byron, 34, wanted in Richmond, Va., where he had escaped Feb. 22 from the penitentiary after serving about two years on a seventeen year "stretch" for assault and robbery, was being returned to the eastern city from Sacramento, Calif., by C. H. Smith, a Virginia prisoner guard.

They were passengers on train No.

On Saturday of this week Dixon has another opportunity to have a new high school. The voters of this school district will decide whether Dixon shall take a forward step and provide itself with a modern high school, or limp along with the old ones.

This time Dixon asks no outside help for the school. We believe that is proper. Dixon can well afford a new high school and Dixon will profit by it far beyond its cost.

Your vote next Saturday will be either a looser or a brick-bat aimed at the growing youth of Dixon.

Whether President Coolidge's special train will pass through Dixon on its way west from Chicago Tuesday evening could not be learned today, local railroad officials having received no word and The Associated Press offices in Chicago not being able to get information.

It is known the Northwestern will transport the train from Chicago to Rapid City, S. D., but whether it will pass through Dixon on the Galena and Iowa divisions, or be taken through Wisconsin and Minnesota is not known today.

Should it be taken over the Galena division it will not be before a late hour Tuesday evening, and almost certainly would not stop here.

Washington, June 13—(AP)—President and Mrs. Coolidge leave Washington tonight for a far away corner in western South Dakota to spend their summer vacation in the state game lodge of the Black Hills.

It is the first time the President has planned such an extended trip in so comparatively a remote section of the country and in consequence the preparations for the journey inordinately taxed the energies of the White House staff.

The presidential train will make its first scheduled stop after leaving Washington at Hammond, Ind., where Tuesday Mr. Coolidge will dedicate the Wicher Memorial Park to the World War veterans.

In view of the busy week-end which caused Mr. Coolidge to forsake his office in order to participate in the celebration for Cole, Charles A. Lindbergh, the last day in Washington found many matters awaiting attention. The President also was to make a brief address before the First International Congress of Soil Science.

Except for the usual large party of White House officials and newspaper writers and photographers, the President will have no guests on his special train. Postmaster General New, a former senator from Indiana, has been invited to accompany the President to Hammond.

Body of Woman is Found in Mine as Gangster Admits

Marion, Ill., June 13—(AP)—The body of a woman believed to be that of Mrs. Lory L. Price, who with her husband, a state highway patrolman, was slain by gangsters last January 18, was found today in the abandoned coal mine shaft near here, in which Art Newman, former lieutenant of Charles Birger, gang leader, declared it had been thrown.

Excavators uncovered what appeared to be a woman's forehead and hair. The coroner went down into the shaft to make an inspection.

The body was removed and identified positively by Sheriff Oren Coleman as that of the missing woman. She was wearing a purple dress such as was missing from her wardrobe.

EDITORIAL
PASS THE GAS TAX.

The Telegraph believes that the present gasoline tax bill before the legislature is a good bill and should pass and hopes that the members of the house and senate from this district will support the measure. The new gas tax bill, providing that fifty per cent of the collected tax will be returned to the counties in which it is collected, has some features which recommend it even over the original bill. It will provide a road fund which will be available for use in each individual county for the paving of county roads to be designated by the county supervisors and therefore would allow the building of some roads important to local traffic but not important as a part of a statewide road system.

The gas tax will mean more good roads. It will also mean that the visitors who use our roads will help to pay for them and to maintain them. The gas tax is the fairest possible means of raising money for road work because it is paid by only those who use the roads and it is paid in proportion to the mileage the taxpayer drives and size and weight of his vehicle.

FROM DROWNING

Children, Aged 10 and 13, Owe Lives to Road Workman

Leona Johnson, 13, of Rochelle, was rescued from a watery grave Friday night by Ted Ragen, 24, an employee of the McCarthy Construction company at the Meridian highway camp there, and although unconscious, was revived by Supt. Jay Blake and other members of the group.

Leona with a friend, Ada Johnson, 10-years-old, was bathing in the quarry, opened last year by the city as a municipal pool. While swimming in water 20 feet deep, she was attacked by cramps and sank, dragging her young companion down with her.

Ragen, attracted by the screams of the children, rushed from the camp a few rods distant and dived into the pool. Both of the children were under the water when he reached them and dragged the pair to shore. Artificial respiration was employed for the older child, who revived a few minutes later. Ada, aside from suffering from shock, was none the worse for her experience.

Kept in Dixon Jail
Byron, in a cell at the city police station, talked freely this morning. He admitted having a dozen aliases and having passed spurious express checks in Illinois in Oak Park and Bloomington since his escape from the Virginia state penitentiary.

"I will make another attempt to get away if I get a chance," he told officers this morning. "Back in Virginia, a prisoner can get 39 lashes for doing what I did yesterday, and I don't want that kind of treatment. I think they figure on sending me over to Maryland, when I get through in Virginia."

Byron told the officers that he had been in Dixon and Sterling since his escape from the Virginia penitentiary on Washington's birthday last, when he saved his way to freedom with another prisoner known as Williams, who is now sought in the western states.

Had Dental Work Done Here
"A dentist here in Dixon treated a tooth for me and I was going to put over some checks here, but I went from here to Bloomington and laid some down, then went over to Oak Park and laid some more, then hit for the west. It was too hot for me in Chicago."

Byron's face bore several scratches where he had slid when he jumped from the window of the train which was traveling at a rate of about 25 miles an hour. His right forearm was badly swollen, where the handcuffs had cut through the wrist to the bone. His ankles were also cut and bruised from the shackles. In his leap from the train, the lock of one of the shackles was jammed and the iron could not be removed. Both wrists bore deep cuts from the handcuffs and Byron was given the attention of a physician before leaving here at noon.

Georgia Woman Brutally Beaten by Hooded Band
Gainesville, Ga., June 13—(AP)—Brutally beaten by a hooded band early yesterday, Mrs. Ansley Bowers of Toocoo, Stephens county, was in a hospital here today for treatment for "serious injuries."

Details of the flogging reported here were meagre. Stephens county officials declined to discuss the affair.

Information was that Mrs. Bowers and her son, Lloyd, were taken from their home by a band of hooded men yesterday, driven to a lonely spot and flogged. The band then departed, leaving the woman unconscious and the son hardly able to move.

Mrs. Lyle Northrup Died This Morning

Mrs. Lyle Northrup, 524 Nachusa avenue, passed away shortly after midnight this morning at the Dixon public hospital, where she recently submitted to a serious operation. The funeral arrangements had not been completed today and together with the complete obituary will be published later.

Joliet, Ill., June 13—(AP)—After a terrific gun fight in the yard of the county jail in the middle of the city here at noon today, two of five condemned convicts who escaped shortly before noon, were shot, two more were recaptured and one, Charles Shander, effected his escape.

The five desperate men, who were sentenced to hang for the murder of Deputy Warden Peter N. Klein during an escape from the new state prison a year ago, appeared in the stockade which surrounds the newly erected gallows on which the men are to hang, and the alarm was sounded. Police of the city and deputy sheriffs surrounded the yard and a gun fight ensued. The two convicts who were shot may die and the report is that the two who were recaptured were severely beaten.

Crowd in Angry Mood
As the gun fight developed, a noon day crowd was attracted to the scene. As the men were subdued, the crowds took up the cry of "hang them". Police were forced to threaten the crowds with loaded guns before the hundreds of people retreated.

The break came as the men were being led at noon in their compartment in the southwest wing of the jail. Evan Isaacs, a keeper, had handed food to Duschowski. Instead of taking the tin dish, Duschowski swung his arm around Isaacs' neck and overpowered him.

Stalesky and Torres seized Jailer William Hinkle and quickly overpowered him. Then the five convicts ran to the office of the jail on the first floor and seized several guns.

Going down the passageway which leads from the rear of the jail to the stockade which surrounds the scaffold on which the men are to be executed, the quintet met Sheriff Markgraf, coming from the house.

Captured Sheriff
They pointed their revolvers at Markgraf and ordered him to put up his hands. The sheriff complied and the convicts then started to push him toward his Lincoln sedan which was parked inside the stockade.

Mrs. Markgraf, looking from a window of the sheriff's residence, saw what was occurring and screaming ran into the stockade. She attempted to push the convicts away from her husband and they thrust her aside. The woman then fainted.

The convicts, Charles Duschowski, Walter Stalesky, Charles Shander, Gregorio Rizzo and Roberto Torres, made the sheriff take the driver's seat in the car and then Stalesky, gun in hand, took a seat alongside the sheriff. He put the gun against the sheriff's ribs and ordered him to drive from the stockade.

Guards Open Fire.
As soon as the car started, guards who are on duty at the front of the jail came running to the entrance to the stockade and immediately opened fire. Stalesky slumped, seriously wounded as the first bullets ripped through the car.

At the same time another group of guards came through the passageway door and began firing. Thus the sheriff was between two lines of fire. "Don't shoot," he shouted as a bullet plowed its way through his hat.

The convicts then leaped from the machine and retreated into a corner. Jailer Leo Lamb, leaning from a window in the sheriff's residence, shot down Gregorio Rizo, the bullet going through his head. He may die, Torres, another Mexican, was also wounded during the firing.

Quartet Overpowered
The special guards, augmented by regular prison guards, Captain McCreaney and a squad of police, State Patrolman James O'Neill and others charged into the stockade and quickly overpowered the quartet. Shander disappeared during the hand-to-hand fighting in the stockade and was believed to be hiding somewhere around the jail.

Duschowski, the burly convict, known as the worst of the bad men, was severely beaten by the guards before he was taken to the hospital.

ROAD CRISIS
OF LEE NOW
BEFORE DADSHave $3,000 to Make $40,000 Worth of Repairs in Co.

A crisis which confronts Lee county with $40,000 worth of bridges and culverts in need of immediate repair as a result of the recent flood, and with only $3,000 available for the carrying on of this work, was brought to the attention of the board of supervisors in the opening session of the regular June meeting this morning. County Superintendent of Highways Fred W. Leake addressed the board and explained that at least $25,000 was needed at once for the construction of new bridges and that $8,000 was necessary for county aid in repaving damages to bridges and culverts on the county highway system.

Supervisor Henry Knecht of the road and bridge committee explained to the board that an appropriation of $40,000 was needed at once for the repair work on county highways. In some instances, he stated, bridges will have to be rebuilt or the roads closed. Abutments have been washed out and in some cases the bridge structures are in the creeks, it is stated.

Road Force Reduced.
Supervisor Gilbert Finch explains to the board the economy program being practiced by the road and bridge committee this season.

"Last year there were 28 names on the pay roll where this year the number has been reduced to nine. In addition to this reduction, the road and bridge committee has succeeded in reducing the cost of operation of the county highway patrol system. The committee thus far has not received from last year's taxes, and the bills for the month of May, salaries and operating expenses, were paid out of last year's funds," he said.

In reply to a question asked by Supervisor Brucker of China township, in which he suggested the use of the $35,000 road graveling fund for the purpose of meeting the crises, Supervisor John Banks of Brooklyn township replied:

Recalled Recent Vote.
"Brooklyn township has never asked Lee county for aid in the construction of bridges. It has been stated that $40,000 is necessary to care for the emergency and with only $3,000 to do it with. I object to the use of the gravel fund for this work. In the recent election, the county voted down the special tax for road graveling purposes. In my township, the proposition carried as it did in some of the others. Some townships have already placed some gravel under the old plan and it would be unfair to use this fund for this purpose. Several of the townships which voted down the gravel tax are before this board at this time seeking county aid to rebuild bridges. It would be an unfair proposition to these townships who have voted favorably to the graveling program and have this work under way. The road and bridge committee know what is needed and I believe that they should present a resolution to this board to care for this crisis which I know exists."

The Brooklyn supervisor's motion to refer the matter of financing the amount necessary for the repair and building of bridges throughout the county was referred to the road and bridge committee to present a resolution at this session.

J. G. Becker, president of the Lee County Farmer's Institute came before the board asking for an appropriation of $100 to be used toward the defraying of expenses in holding institutes in Steward, Ashton and Sublette this year. The matter was referred to the finance committee to present their recommendation.

Clifton Hatch and party of friends stopped off in Dixon a few minutes today to visit briefly with his sister, Miss Ida Hatch, enroute to Waterloo, Ia.

LOOKING INTO TELEVISION'S CRYSTAL—

By Olive Roberts Barton
We took it calmly enough when Captain Nemo came true and ships sailed under water. When Darius Green and his flying machine stepped out of the fairy tale class and a boy of twenty got into a "flying machine" one night, turned on the gas, and ate dinner the next night in Paris we started to emerge from our coma.

What will happen when television ceases to be a prophesy, we can only guess. Permit me to put on the moon covered robe of the Swami and try to persuade your mind to follow mine. It will not take long to verify or contradict my telepathy. Television is already with us.

"Ladies and gentlemen! I see a maiden at one end of the telephone. At the other end is a man, a handsome young man, her lover. On his end of the line is an instrument that permits him to see her. She does not know that he can see her. She has forgotten to close the lens on the television instrument at her elbow."
"The lady in question has been helping to can strawberries. There is a red smudge on her nose. Her hair is still in its water-wave combs, told in place by an old necktie. Her dress is a year-before-last creation, torn under the arm, buttonless, and smeared in front."

"Result—a broken engagement."
"Gentlemen and ladies! I see a ball game, New York and Philadelphia, Babe Ruth at bat. Stadium with fifty thousand seats. Fifty thousand fans at fifty thousand telephones watching the game through telephone instruments. Results—no gate receipts—end of baseball."

"Husband working at night may forget to shut off the pushyfoot machine to his telephone. His wife can check up on an empty office and needs on diving rod to know that he is at John Smith's playing poker."
"Ladies and gentlemen, I see nothing but trouble. We shall surely be living in glass houses."

The WOMAN'S DAY— by ALLENE SUMNER

Fairy tales, more or less, in the morning news. E. M. Statler, president of that chain of hotels, marries the girl who has been his secretary for 11 years. Just think! That means always being able to get a room in one of her husband's hotels—which is more than lesser mortals can do! Princess Juliana of Holland has her 18th birthday and is allowed $40,000 a year spending money by the government. Of course, I wouldn't mind having that sum myself. But when you consider that Juliana is a princess and who you consider the girl with that income whose fathers are neither kings nor emperors, and when you consider what a princess's standard of living must be, it doesn't seem such a huge amount!

FAT WIFE DIVORCED
Here's a nice husband of Geneva who sued his wife for divorce on the grounds of obesity. He said that she ate as much food as four normal people and that when he married her he did not contract to feed four women. Sounds fair enough at that!

"GROW LITTLE THIN GIRL"
Which makes one wonder if that musical comedy realm wherein the musical comedy liked 'em fat and loathed 'em lean, still exists. You may recall the poor little fat girl who, unable to find anyone to love her in her native land, wandered to parts afar, coming to this isle where fat girls were at a premium and where she found herself the toast of the island. But I am inclined to think that no such fairyland can exist today, or none of us emboldened ones would tarry here to receive the lilies and scorn and revivings of our fellow men and women.

THE BUTCHER'S BILL
A certain bride of a midwest city was threatened with suit by a butcher unless she paid the meat bill. She referred the butcher to her husband. Butcher refused to be referred. "You ate half the meat, didn't you?" was his come-back. Which proves that the world at large recognizes the topsy-turvy state of marital affairs today when, with both men and women working outside the home and earning money, it is difficult for a butcher to see just who is responsible for the meat bill.

IT DIDN'T PASS
There is nothing to prevent employers of Great Britain from firing their women employees if they marry. The House of Commons recently rejected a bill which would prevent employers from dismissing women for this reason. Lady Astor supported the bill. When the opposition began the old yelp of "Woman's place being in the home" and "Marriage is a full-time job for woman," Lady Nancy remarked, "women might have twins every year and still be as efficient as many members of Parliament." That's telling 'em!

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY
BREAKFAST—Chilled grape fruit, cereal cooked with raisins, cream, sour cream waffles, combination syrup, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Eggplant with cheese, romaine salad, orange custard, graham cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER—Broiled fresh fish, lemon butter, new potatoes in white sauce, buttered new beets, cucumber and pineapple salad, whole wheat bread, strawberry sponge, milk, coffee.

A syrup made with 1 cup brown sugar and 1 cup white sugar is a delicious substitute for maple syrup just at this time of the year. A "syrup" of cream of tartar will prevent the syrup from crystallizing if a thick syrup is wanted.

Eggplant With Cheese

Six slices eggplant, 2 tomatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1 cup top milk, 1/2 cup grated cheese, 2 tablespoons heavy cream.

The eggplant should be cut in slices about 1/4 inch thick. Pare, sprinkle each slice with salt and pile one on top of the other. Cover with a plate and put on a weight of at least 2 pounds and let stand one hour. Drain and throw away the juice. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and add tomatoes peeled and finely chopped after removing seeds. Bring to the boiling point. Spread evenly in the bottom of a shallow baking dish. In the meantime saute the prepared eggplant in butter until thoroughly cooked. Place slices on the sauce making them slightly overlap. Mix cheese to a smooth paste with cream and spread over eggplant. Put into a hot oven until thoroughly heated and well browned on top.

OLD MASTERS

Over hill, over dale,
Through bush, through brier,
Over park, over pale,
Through flood, through fire,
I do wander everywhere,
Swifter than the moonbeam's sphere;
And I serve the fairy queen,
To dew her orbs upon the green:
The cowslips tall her pensioners be;
In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favors,
In those freckles live their savors:
I must go seek some dew drops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear."
—William Shakespeare: From "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Surprise Party Worked Two Ways

Mrs. O. E. Strock was hostess Thursday evening at a very enjoyable "surprise" party for her Sunday School class of Grace Evangelical church and a few friends. As they met at Mrs. Strock's home, they were invited to go for a ride, which took them to the Colonial Inn at Grand Detour, where a delicious chicken dinner awaited them. When the guests took their places at the table, they found another surprise, a beautiful hand painted plate for each member. After all had done justice to the delicious food, the "surprise" assumed another turn, when a guest of the evening was called upon for a toast. He responded with a few words of appreciation of the loyalty of this class and their teacher, and also congratulations to the five members who are of the 1927 high school graduating class, and then "surprised" the hostess Mrs. Strock, by reminding her of her birthday and presenting her with a gift of silver salad forks in behalf of the class. She soon recovered from the surprise and heartily thanked them for the kind remembrance.
"The happy company then returned to the home of the hostess where the evening was delightfully spent with games and music."
Miss Ona Mentzler, a student of Naperville University, who was an out of town guest, favored with a beautiful solo and readings and added much to the enjoyment of the party.
The evening proved one of great pleasure for all attending and all voted Mr. and Mrs. Strock royal entertainers.

CHICAGO JOURNALISM.

Chicago is a great city and its newspapers are great from a commercial standpoint. Chicago journalism has lost its influence because it pursues a course long ago discarded even by the county seat weekly. When fathers of the present generation owned the newspapers, they vied one with the other in bitterness. The one who could say the most bitter things about the other was accorded the honors of being the best editor.

Sons who inherited the newspapers do not carry on in the same fashion. They risked having it said of them that they are not the editors their fathers were, but that has not deterred them from their course. Their own generation votes them equally or more successful.

While this evolution has been in progress in the country press, the metropolitan press of Chicago continues in the old way, and wonders why it is without influence. It goes in a circle. It assaults and ridicules and attempts to browbeat all in its way. When it fails to win its point, when it fails to win public support, it shows its anger and repeats its process.

At present its assault is being made upon the general assembly and its ridicule is heaped upon the people downstate. The process does not win and will not win.

Chicago journalism never is willing to compromise. During the last few weeks a writer has been picturing the legislature as a lot of vote traders. If it appears that Chicago legislators have compromised with other members, that is occasion for further assault.

We have always understood that the constitution of the United States was a series of compromises. Chicago journalism would have wrecked it all on its demands for no compromise. Large states made concessions to small states and small states made concessions to large ones, and by that process they came to agreement.

The general assembly works in the same manner. None can have his own way unrestricted.

We believe Chicago sentiment is being misrepresented by Chicago journalism. Anyhow it rebukes these journals often when the test comes.

Loud in their condemnation of things rural, these journals have failed to realize that they never have outgrown small town journalism.—Moline Dispatch.

MORE THAN A FLIER.

Lindbergh is more than a flier, and that is why his achievement grew and grew, reaching proportions beyond anticipations of all. He sings as he goes and says the right thing at the right time, something not all of us are able to do.

He kept informed as to the "wonderful flight" of Chamberlin and Levine and "all on board the Memphis were happy to know that the fliers came down safely." He regretted that the Memphis did not sight the plane as did the Mauretania.

"It was a fine piece of work and another feather in the cap of aviators. Feats such as the Columbia's all have a tendency to aid in the development of aviation throughout the world."

The young man is poetry in motion in air or on the ground, and it is not a matter of wonder that the poets have gone wild.

YEP, BEAT 'EM UP!

Nagging wives have been much to the forefront in European prints lately.

One wise British doctor said a nagging wife was good for a man, for she kept him up to the mark.

Another retorted that a nagging wife was a bad sign, was a sick woman, probably she was not getting the proper nourishment, or perhaps her husband was not kind to her.

And then a French judge naturally went out and spilled the beans. He probably did it because he was in France where judges are not elected by popular vote and where women have not the right of suffrage. At any rate, taking his courage in his two hands, this Solomon said that a husband had a perfect right to beat his wife if she nagged and irritated him. The sapient jurist probably took to heart more than his books the old English saw:

"A woman, a dog and a hickory tree,
The more you beat them the better they be."

UNDERLINGS SHOW THE WAY.

It is remarkable that while politicians quarrel over federal administration and government bureaus, the vast body of government employes are able to carry out their duties as well and efficiently as they do, unmindful of the storm and strife of personal and party grudges and bickerings that go on above them.

On June 30 Herbert Lincoln Shepard will be retired from the Treasury Department in Washington after years of service, with only 62 days' sick leave. Prolonged service of this kind puts to shame the unconstructive wailings of the chronic critics.

A hammer 30 years old, worn by 360 million blows, was found recently. We are wondering if they finally got that picture hung just where friends wife wanted it.

THE ANYMATES
STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

King Roar had spread the news around that Scouty sure was safe and sound, and when the Tinsies went to bed they all seemed satisfied. But in the middle of the night, wee Copy woke, as if in fright. He couldn't go to sleep again, no matter how he tried.

"I'll bet I know what's ailing me. Wee Scouty's on my mind," said he. "I think I'll sneak down to the dock and look around a bit." He crawled away, and didn't peep, but left the others sound asleep. And when he reached the dock he found a dandy place to sit.

The moon was high, the sky was clear and not a sound could Copy hear, except when little fish would jump, or frogs nearby would croak. It made him drowsy sitting there, so comfy in the cooling air. He fell asleep, an hour or two, and then again awoke.

The moon by now was almost gone, and Copy thought, 'twill soon be dawn. "I guess I'll wait till then," said he, "for Scouty may appear. If he comes up I know he'll call, and try to signal us all. The others will be fast asleep, so I had best stay here."

Then dawn brought the broad daylight, but Scouty was nowhere in sight. The stream was just as quiet and as pretty as could be. So Copy thought, "Well, I'm in trim and feel like taking quite a swim. Someday must find Scouty, and I guess it's up to me."

With spirit then he was alive and from the dock he took a dive. Right quickly through the water, like a little fish he sped. Down, down he went quite unafraid and when the trip was almost made, he suddenly noted Scouty, in the seaweed, just ahead.

(Copy cuts Scouty free from the seaweed.)

An Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE by PAUL ADAMS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is Chapter 59 of the series of articles written by a correspondent for The Telegraph who is revisiting France.

CHAPTER LIX

Oh, by the way! Meet the guard of the tomb of Napoleon in the Invalides.

His name is Louis Delecourt—residence address: No. 6 Boulevard des Invalides, 1st Arrondissement.

Louis is 83 years old, going on 84. He has four medals—the medaille militaire, two medals awarded for acts of bravery and the medal of the war of 1870. He fought under Marechal Bazin in that war. He was captured twice by the Germans and each time escaped to do a little more fighting for the Patrie. His beat is around the marked railing under the dome of the Invalides. And don't ever try to lean elbows on that railing without first having removed the hat.

"Otez votre chapeau! Toet-Sweet!" The command is brusque. Louis means business. He don't fool, of course only those who are absent-minded make the error. But the cause of the error makes no difference.

"I can't say," was his answer. And then he used the expression which was coined by soldiers of Napoleon on the battlefield of Waterloo: "Perhaps I will be eating dandelions by the roots."

In other words Louis Delecourt probably will hold open house around the tomb of Napoleon in September.

CIVIC ACHIEVEMENTS

A good many cities have public improvement projects which they cannot carry to completion because of deadlocks with property owners.

Chambers of commerce fill one of their greatest services to their communities when they are the means for breaking down these deadlocks, seeing that both parties are satisfied on their respective claims, and giving the people the advantage of their efforts.

How the Johnstown, Pa., Chamber of Commerce functioned in a case of this kind, giving the city its greatest public improvement in years, illustrates the point. By acting as mediator and mediator, the chamber of commerce offered its services as mediator and drafted the proposals which were finally accepted by both sides.

Under the terms of the agreement the city will obtain a new river wall, two concrete bridges and a 40-foot thoroughfare to replace a 40-foot street. The total cost will be $900,000, half of which will be born by the city.

Industries usually do their share when all the facts are known.

When you have any trouble with your digestion, such as gas, heaviness and indigestion, why fool with things which at best can give only partial relief.

Why not get a medicine that is made to help strengthen your upset, disordered stomach so that it will do its work without artificial help.

Such a medicine is Dare's Mentha Pepsin, a delightful elixir that is sold by Rowland's Pharmacy, Dixon and Rochelle, and all live druggists with the distinct understanding that if it doesn't greatly help your money will be gladly returned.

ditor in a dispute between the city and a steel company, a street was vacated and a boulevard connecting the southern and northern ends of the city resulted.

This boulevard was a part of the Johnstown city plan. Both sides were deadlocked in a dispute regarding respective financial responsibility, the city maintaining that the steel company should pay a large part of the cost because the street would become the property of the company as the abutting property holder.

The Chamber of Commerce offered its services as mediator and drafted the proposals which were finally accepted by both sides.

SAINT and SINNER

They paused before the smart, modern new house on Serenity Boulevard in Enfield Addition, and looked at it as if they had never seen it before. It looked very large and splendid to Faith Hathaway, after the shabby, ramshackle little house in Myrtle street, where she had spent the last ten years of her life. Finished in a creamy-tan stucco, with its darkened tile roof, in the flat, unadorned Spanish style, it looked warm and friendly and homelike, for all its newness. A deep porch, supported by big, square pillars with Doric bases, filled up the shallow L made by the jutting out of the front bedroom beyond hall and living room.

"Like it, honey?" Bob asked, his hand tightening on her arm, his brilliant blue eyes searching her luminous, uplifted face.

"I adore it," Faith said, with a catch in her breath. "Oh, have you a key?" she asked in a small panic. "I left mine in my old purse."

"I have a key!" he laughed at her. "Come along, Mrs. Hathaway, and inspect your new home. I polished the living room and dining room floors this morning, and had lots of fun running the vacuum cleaner. It sings a funny, deep, growling song."

She knew he was talking at random, to hide his embarrassment. Maybe Bob was afraid, too; maybe he, too, trembled on the threshold of marriage.

She saw that his strong, lean fingers were trembling as they lifted the shiny new key into the shiny new Yale lock. She wanted to stoop and kiss his fingers, his dear, dear fingers.

"Thank heaven, the electric lights are connected," he commented in a husky voice as he switched on the hall light.

With his arm about her waist, Bob led her into the big living room, with its beamed ceiling, and its warm, tan walls. A deep fireplace took up half the west wall, the remainder of the space, on each side of the fireplace, being taken up with built-in bookshelves, already well stocked with Bob's library. Beneath the great arch of the front windows was a long, deep couch, upholstered in tapestry. A long, slim, arched, aristocratic looking Cogswell chair, an enormous wing chair, three "occasional" chairs, tabourets, an upholstered bench or two, a Sheraton desk, a radio cabinet, and a baby grand piano—Bob's wedding gift to Faith—comprised the furniture of the living room.

Faith was trailing reverent fingers over the satiny finish of the sideboard when Bob swept her into his arms, his face suddenly flushed with passion.

"You haven't said yet that you love me—no since we were married," he reproached her. "You've kept me at arm's length. Don't look as if you are afraid of me. Let me see your eyes! And then—say it! Say, 'Bob, I love you.'"

He held her so tightly that she could scarcely move sufficiently to reach up a hand to touch his crisp, chestnut hair.

"Bob," his voice quivered. "Oh, Bob, my darling, I love you!" She raised her eyes to him then, and they were heavy and misty with passion. Her body felt weak and limp, as if she would fall if he loosened his hold. But his arms strained her even more tightly to him; his head dropped suddenly to her breast, and her hands languid with love, cupped his flushed cheeks, the tips of her fingers following the line of his strong, thick, golden-brown eyebrows.

"And I love you," he told her jerkily, his breath warm against her. The instinctive reserve that had made her always lift her lips from his while he was still drinking thirstily of love, melted then. As he lifted his face, his eyes burning and almost fierce in their demands, she laid her mouth against his of her own accord, heard, through the pounding of her pulses, a glad cry from her heart: "Why, I'm his wife now! It's all right! I'm his wife, his wife!"

"TOMORROW: Faith finds perfect happiness in love fulfilled."

OLD WOUNDS KILL

Hartlepool, Eng. — When German aviators bombarded this city 12 years ago, Mrs. Sarah Stringer was one of the casualties, suffering several shrapnel wounds. They never healed properly and when she died recently the coroner's jury returned a verdict of "death following wounds received during the bombardment."

Five of seven Sunday major league games were won by a margin of a single run. Both league leaders were defeated.

A rookie Robin pitcher was the hero of the fray in which his club felled the league leaders.

Pie Traynor, crack Pittsburgh third baseman, split a finger. The injury may keep him out of the lineup for a week.

In the Yankee game Babe Ruth poled out his 21st home run, going ahead of 1921, his record year. The Yanks could not quite wipe out Cleveland's lead and lost by 8-7.

Although outlast almost 2-1, the Cardinals defeated the Phillies 5-4.

Relief pitchers were having a big day. Added to the names of Plitt and Pipiras, was that of Carroll of the Tigers who like them supplied fresh batting punch when needed most.

Chicago's two second place clubs were having mingled fortunes. While the White Sox dropped their second to the Senators by 6-1, the Cubs crowded the Pirates for first place with their eighth straight victory.

The Boston Braves disposed of the struggling Reds 4-1.

McGraw Pulls Trade to Acquire Batting Power

New York, June 13—(AP)—Bent on adding battery strength to a club which is strong everywhere else, John McGraw of the Giants has just completed the biggest player swap of the current season with the Boston Braves.

Lindbergh on the Memphis

His deed of heroism and his mission of friendship consummated, Lindbergh was given a rousing sendoff when he bade final farewell to France. The picture at the top shows Lindbergh leaving a French cutter to board a motorboat from the U. S. scout cruiser Memphis off Cherbourg. The circles below show "the colonel's" reception by officers and men of the Memphis.

AMUSEMENTS

FRENCH-REVUE FUREUR

No wonder Lindbergh was in haste to reach Paris if the sights in the world's joy capital are comparable to those revealed in "Gay Paree" at the 4 Cohns theater, Chicago, according to newspaper critics. Without exception the writing men pronounced the big extravaganza to be at once the most daring, sensational, beautiful, magnificent and entertaining revue that the Windy City has ever beheld.

In fashioning the show it appears that the Messrs. Shubert have drawn upon Frenchy ideals and ideas more liberally than any other producer has had the temerity to do in the past. Although "Gay Paree" is a distinct departure from American custom so artistically are the Gallic innovations accomplished that one forgets the disregard of old conventions and at once marvels and is enraptured by a panoramic vista of forty-one scenes, unsurpassed for the allure of their eye filling moments.

There are over 150 persons engaged in this, the new and 1927 edition of "Gay Paree." Foremost are Sophie Tucker and Chic Sale. Miss Tucker obliges with an entire new repertoire of raffish songs besides appearing in several of the sophisticated sketches. Sale, highly regarded as the greatest of all impersonators of small town characters, likewise provides a new gallery of types.

The Chicago penmen lay particular stress on the loveliness of the large chorus. The charms of the fair figurantes are seen to particular advantage in such gorgeous tableaux as "Fan of Girls," "Kandahar Isle," "Bacchanal," "Oriental Nights," and "Cascade d'Or." The management announces that mail orders accompanied by remittances will receive prompt attention.

Irish Hearts

"IRISH HEARTS," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Emmett Murtough of Kiltanmaul, Ireland, emigrates to America and is followed by Sheila Kildare, to whom he is betrothed, and her father. Murtough evades the marriage, however, and Sheila makes friends with the family of Rory O'Shea, a professional boater, whose kindly attentions interest her. Murtough is hired by bootleggers to drive a truck and becomes involved with Clarice Clancey, a cabaret girl. There is a party at the "Castle," one of the notorious night clubs of New York City.

"But one of those guys is familiar to me even if he is all dressed up," Devlin studied the party through his cigarette smoke. "I'd certainly like to know where I have seen that baby before."
"Probably in some other speakeasy. You see a lot of 'em around that you never remember now-adays."
"Do you know much about this kid you're with?"
"I've known Clarice for a couple of months, just off an 'em."
"Is she hooked up with any mobs?"
"Not that I know of; why, what's the matter? What are you questioning about her?"
"I'm not, but you and me are in a business where suspicious when they are right are valuable. And most of all, I'm suspicious of mobs, any kind, any age and anywhere."
"Oh, Clarice is all right. She's just a kid that likes a joy ride." Devlin subsided, but he kept his eyes on the party of three and when the girls returned to the table he asked Clarice if she knew who they were.

"Oh, a couple of spinach growers, I guess. They're letting them-

"Who's the boy friend who deserted you?"

selves be taken for plenty, so I should care."

"Did you hear their names?"

"I heard one of them call the young fellow facing us 'Gus,' that's all."

"Gus?" Devlin turned the name over in his mind, but he could not piece together his recollection of the familiar face and the name. "Well, I guess it's on me," he smiled at Murtough and ordered a drink. Both men grew tired of the party and after paying their checks left. Neither Clarice or Clance would be through until the last guest left, which might be five and it might be nine o'clock in the morning.

"Never tell a gal who hangs around the Broadway dumps anything," Devlin advised Murtough on the way down town in the car. "I been busting around on one racket and another ever since I was gun-boy for a gangster."

"What's a gun-boy?" asked Murtough. "You know I haven't been over long from Ireland and I don't know all the ropes."

"They ain't used so much now, but in the old days every time somebody was to be bumped off a kid was taken along. He carried the gun until his chief was set for the victim and the minute the shooting happened the gun was slipped back to the kid and he disappeared under the very legs of the crowd looking for the killer. Fast automobiles have eliminated the kid in making a getaway today, though. A kid would only be in the way."

Murtough decided that of all the men he had met at the West End Club and among those who worked for Mannie Clocker that Devlin was the wisest and smartest of the lot. He was well dressed, so clean that Murtough mentally named him a "kude," especially when he saw the high polish on his companion's fingernails in the restaurant. But Murtough noticed, also, that those same fingers were supple and wiry and filled with potential strength and harm for anyone who crossed Devlin.

Sleep did not come easily to Murtough that night. The memory of Clarice and how she had first appealed to him with her worldly New York chatter when he was fresh from Ireland clouded his mind. He compared her again, as he had compared her before, with Sheila. He knew that Sheila was the better of the two women; there never was doubt of that before, and none now, but Sheila did not seem to catch on, to be able to pick up the wise cracks that slipped off Clarice's tongue so easily. He was honestly grateful for Sheila's goodness to him during the period he was confined with his injured shoulder. But with the wound healed and the opportunity for parties and merry-making at hand, her kindness diminished in its relative importance.

With the job tomorrow night Murtough again became an active earner on the Clocker's payroll. There would be plenty of money to spend, and he had learned his lesson; he wouldn't drink so much and he would not gamble. That was definite. There was the dance at the club. It was true he had in a way promised Clarice he would take her, but in the face of Sheila's treatment of him he could not well have done otherwise than to invite her. She had been proud of that, had Sheila.

What of this Rory O'Shea. Was Sheila still interested in him? Suppose he won from Campana, would that make any difference, would that raise him in Sheila's estimation? Murtough realized now that it was more the attacks that he and Old Tom Kildare had hurled upon the boy that had won Sheila to his defense than the casual interest her meeting with him had awakened. After all, Sheila was old-fashioned; anyone would have to admit that. She couldn't compare to girls like Clarice, who had been born and bred right here on the edge of the Great White Way. He was growing up in a fast crowd, men who got money and lots of it. What if they were law-breakers? Besides, did not they tell him that the prohibition law was unpopular and made only to be broken? These men certainly knew more than he did about America! Thus blinded by the glamour of his foolish desires for the limelight in which played the crooks and thieves with whom he was dealing, Emmett Murtough, like other misled and ignorant youths, turned his eyes from goodness. He fell asleep with the vision of Clarice in fine feathers, a fine motor car for himself and money with which to satisfy every wish.

While he dreamed the tall, thin and dominating man of the party of three which had piqued the curiosity of Devlin queried Clarice.

"Whose the boy friend who deserted you?" he asked. "The big fellow, I mean."

"Just a friend for old time's sake," replied Clarice pertly.

"You must have been brought up in a coal yard, then," remarked the one they called Gus. "He looks like a truck driver to me."

"Is that supposed to be sarcastic?" asked Clarice. "Because if you meant it that way you lose; that's just what he is, a truck driver and a good one. I what the little birdies tell me is right."

"Who does he drive for?"

"How should I know?"

"Could you find out? I might have something good for a smart fellow that really can drive a truck."

"How good?"

"You find out then I'll tell you. What's he mean, you, girly?"

"Well, he might mean 'ham and' for life, and again he may not mean anything."

"Has he got any money?"

"Oh, I guess he has a B. R. now and then, but, of course, he don't ride in no Rolls."

"Suppose I paved a way for him to get a quick and easy five grand and he made it through you, where would you stand?"

"Five grand! Well, that'd start housekeeping in a modest way provided there was more coming from the same direction."

"Find out, girly, just what kind of a truck he drives, for who and from where. Get me?"

"I got you, Gus, and I'll do it. All he needs is a start among regular guys. Maybe I can lead him to it through you." The pertness in her voice died. "But, say, this ain't no frame-up, is it? I wouldn't frame nobody, not even my worst enemy."

"No, kid, I just like his looks. He looks like he could take care of himself. That's the kind of men I'm always interested in."

"You and me both," replied Clarice archly.

Clarice and Clance passed on to another table, and when the music started they were dancing.

"I know it's him," insisted Gus. "I got only a flash of his face as he toppled off the seat of the truck, and I admit he had on a sweater and a cap, but it's the build of him and the cut of that Irish jib of his that I can't forget."

PARTIAL PAY ON PLANES

London—You can go up now by paying a little down on an airplane in England. Manufacturers have instituted the pay-as-you-fly plan in selling two-seater ships. Prices are within reach of only a few, however; the initial payment is about $1150 with 24 monthly installments of $11.

The custom of a man walking on the side near the street when with a woman arose from the fact that in former times water and refuse fell from roofs and upper windows into an open ditch between street and sidewalk.

FIND ROMAN RELICS

Berlin—While excavating for a building in southern Bavaria, workmen came upon traces of ancient Roman settlements. Bronze swords, hair ornaments and flint weapons were found that date back to the last ice age. Nearly were discovered Roman coins, some bearing the bust of Emperor Marcus Aurelius.

The average number of children in the families of the president has been 3.76. President Tyler, who married twice, heads the list with fourteen. Washington, Madison, Jackson, Polk, Buchanan and Harding had none. Buchanan was a bachelor.

"Plucky Lindy"

The cold gray dawning, of a late May morning,

A youth, a ship and a chance

A deafening roar, and away they soar

A youth and the ship at their goal.

Through miles of space with grim set face

The youth in his ship alone

For hours will race, at a frightful pace

The youth, the ship, and it's drone.

Through hazards untold, in the fearful cold

The youth and the ship fly on

Through rain and sleet, in the pilot's seat

The youth and his ship ply on

Oh the joy untold, when the clouds unfold

For the youth and the ship that night

When his bloodshot eyes, peer from the skies

And see France at last in sight

It was not for gold, or fame untold

This youth and his ship forebore

The thought of dying, the joy of flying

This youth and his ship loved more

Le Bourget at last, the danger past

For the ship and this lonesome boy

He came to the ground, 'midst a mighty sound

As thousands whooped their joy.

Two foreign lands, with outstretched hands

Took youth and ship to their heart.

Ten million Yanks, gave God their thanks

For this boy with the nerve to start.

American born and American spawn

This youth and his ship so true.

Pure nerve and pluck, we'll discount the luck

The universe bows to you.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"GOD THE PRESERVER OF MAN" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, June 12. The Golden Text was from Psalms 16:1, "Preserve me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day; ye are not of the night, nor of darkness. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thess. 5:5, 23).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is the Life, or Intelligence, which forms and preserves the individuality and identity of animals as well as of men. . . . The true sense of being and its eternal perfection should appear now, even as it will hereafter" (p. 550).

THIS HAS HAPPENED

LINDA ANNALLY, elderly American chemist, is summoned to the little jungle-bordered town of PORTO VERDE, in west central Brazil, by his young friend, VILAK, who is concerned for the safety of his beautiful cousin, ELISE MATTHEW, owner of a coffee plantation and other property near Porto Verde.

Vilak believes GAYLORD PRENTISS, a reclusive and forbidding man, known to be an enemy of Elise, may be involved in some way in the deaths. Accordingly, he and Annally set out for Prentiss' house, which is guarded by barbed wire fences and a vicious dog. Elise insists on joining them. Prentiss acts the dog on them and Vilak saves his companion's lives by chloroforming it into unconsciousness.

The next day Elise's two-year-old orphaned nephew is kidnapped. They suspect Prentiss. Vilak leads the pursuit and they follow a circuitous trail of horse tracks and finally come upon the child near a railroad camp.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER XV

VILAK stood silently looking on, half amused, half thoughtful. Elise turned to him, still holding the baby. "You're a dear," she murmured. "I thought it before, but I didn't know it before today I take back everything that I said about you. I was a pig. And when I cried and completely lost control of myself you said nothing, made none of the caustic, sarcastic remarks that you might have made, but instead set about finding Tinky."

And found him. It's a long time since I broke down the way I did this afternoon. But Tinky has become a part of me somehow." She leaned over and kissed Vilak impulsively.

"Here, here," he said sheepishly, taking out his cigaret case. "You certainly are upset. Have one of my strong cigarettes and quiet your nerves." He lit one. "I'd certainly like to know how Tinky got here. I have a theory, but only my friend the civil engineer, who is coming up now, looks as if he might tell us a few facts." He turned to greet the newcomer, who came forward, his dark, pointed face aglow with pleasure.

"Good day, senhorita, amigos," he murmured, shaking hands cordially with the two men and bowing to the girl. "I see you the baby have once more in your arms. I am happy. Most happy."

"It is the senhorita who is happy," Vilak responded. "And she owes her happiness to you."

The other gave a disparaging shrug of his small, well-knit shoulders. "It is nothing that I do. It is nothing."

"Where did you find him?" Vilak queried.

"Over there by the bushes." He pointed off to the patch of vegetation from which they had just come. "It is very strange. Most strange. We were working here, my men and I, spreading gravel along the track where the water has washed the earth away—we cannot do much, but we do what we can—when we hear the noise of horses galloping up the road from which you have come. This is nothing. Often we hear the horses gallop. Many ride past this place. Is it not so?"

"The horses stop for a moment, then they gallop on again. And then we hear other horses gallop. But this also is nothing. This also we hear each hour. But soon also we hear something which is not nothing, something which we work in the wild places here never in our wanderings, the weeping of a child. An Indian baby, I think, deserted by its mother. I go to the bushes to see. And there in the weeds I find it, a white baby I am astonished. A beautiful baby, senhorita, a beautiful baby."

He took one of Vilak's cigarettes. "I know at once when I look that it has not been deserted. It is lost or perhaps it is stolen. I am a stranger here. Also are my men strangers. I ask of one who passes on the road if he has ever before beheld the baby, if he perhaps knows the mother. 'Ah yes!' says he at once. 'Who in Porto Verde does not know? It is the nephew of the Senhorita Marberry.'"

"At once I send a man to ride swift to your fazenda, for I know how great must be your agony. He returns. You are gone, he says, where your servants know not. But I know. You have gone to look for the child. It is not good for him to stay there in the damp bushes where there are mosquitoes which bite and snakes which kill. So I bring him here where I can watch. I fetch for him a blanket so that he will not be on the cold, wet ground—I have also nephews, senhorita. Still he is not happy. He cries always, English words, which I can not well understand. So I bring for him an orange. He eats. He is happy. At last I see you come. And he is very happy."

Vilak lit the other's cigaret, then his own. "Mighty decent of you. Mighty decent. Very few men would have been so thoughtful. I want to assure you that Senhorita Marberry and I are deeply grateful." He smoked thoughtfully. "You didn't have a chance to see the men who were on the horses?"

"No, senhor. It is too late here. We cannot see the road." He looked at his cigaret interestedly. "Very excellent, these cigarettes. Your special brand, no doubt?"

"Exactly. Oriental. I'm glad to hear you say like them. Senhorita Marberry doesn't approve." He glanced toward her smilingly. "Incidentally I haven't introduced you. My client, Senhorita Marberry, I present for all your good wishes. Senhor—" He paused for the name.

TAX REDUCTIONS BY GOVERNMENT MUST COME SLOW

President Warns Business Organizations of United States

Washington, June 11—(AP)—While declaring the administration is striving as always to pave the way for further lowering of the public debt and of taxes, President Coolidge warned last night that hope of further tax reduction was futile unless federal expenditures were held approximately to their present level.

Speaking before the semi-annual budget meeting of heads of government departments, the President said that a surplus of $599,000,000 was certain for the present fiscal year ending June 30, and estimated that the surplus for next year would reach $238,000,000.

As a guide to the future, he said, however, that this year's surplus was of doubtful value because it included a number of extraordinary receipts that could not be counted on for more than a limited period. He cited among these extraordinary items delayed income tax payments, railroad receipts, the capital stock tax and collections from farm loans bonds.

"In considering the possibility of tax reduction," he said, "we must keep in mind that our revenue laws cannot be written from the standpoint of a single year, but must be expected to yield adequate revenue over a period of years. It is essential therefore to discount temporary and non-recurring items and to base the estimated revenue on those resources which can be looked upon as essentially permanent in character."

Must Curtail Expenses
"We have no fear our present revenue laws will not produce ample income to carry on the business of the government. But this does not justify an enlargement of our expenditure program. Rather does it dictate and demand that we make renewed effort to keep within our present expenditures. One thing is certain. Unless we succeed in holding expenditures at about their present level, hope of further tax reduction will be gone."

"In the face of each of the three reductions in taxes since the fiscal year 1921 we have continued to accumulate surpluses at the end of each year. We should not overlook, however, the great influence these surpluses have had in making tax reduction possible. Their application to the further reduction of the public debt has permanently reduced our interest charges. It has been an investment for the people of their own money. In the business of government, as in private business, the time to liquidate indebtedness is in the time of prosperity. The reduction of fixed charges serves a two-fold purpose. It materially assists in maintaining prosperity and would be particularly helpful in adversity."

Benefits of Budget
Discussing the benefits of the budget system the President said that "elimination of non-essentials and direct savings have about reached their limit."

"We are striving as always to pave the way for further reduction of debt and of taxes," he said. "This in itself necessitates unremitting effort to hold the level of our expenditure program. After careful study of our probable financial condition in 1929, it is my desire that the estimates of appropriations for that year be held within a total of $3,300,000,000. This is exclusive of reduction of the debt, the postal service and tax refunds. This maximum has not been fixed arbitrarily. It is the result of careful study of probable financial conditions in 1929."

Referring to the Mississippi Valley flood, Mr. Coolidge said that "all that possible can be done to alleviate distress and suffering is being done."

For Flood Control
"As it develops that additional funds are required for this purpose I am confident they will be provided," he declared. "Control measures that were considered by all as ample to full protection have proven inadequate. Such a disaster must never happen again. A survey is now being made to determine what is needed. That survey will be laid before the Congress."

"From a business standpoint we must anticipate from this disaster a reduction in our prospective revenue and an increase in our prospective expenditures. I am confident this will be an added incentive to effect savings elsewhere."

Estimating that governmental expenditures for the current fiscal year would be kept under $3,000,000,000, Director Lord, of the Budget Bureau called on department heads and bureau chiefs to continue efforts to curtail expenses during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Estimated Surplus
"The last estimate for the current year, made within a few days," he said, "at the semi-annual budget meeting, 'promises' a surplus of $398,974,234, to which you have made generous contribution with an expenditure brought down and held down to $2,975,235,050, which is $3,000,000 less than we spent in 1924, and $25,000,000 less than our $3,000,000,000 limit. This has been exacted, not only by curtailment of expenditures, but by stubbornly holding the line and preventing increases. And this year we have had to provide additional millions for new needs arising from conditions not susceptible of administrative control."

Describing the work of the Budget Bureau, Director Lord asserted: "Waves of new expenditures as a result of new legislation and continued legitimate growth and development of federal business have swept over the economy boat and threatened to sink it, but steady, constant throwing over of waste and continued stopping of leaks have kept it afloat, notwithstanding accumulating expenditures at times have gained slightly. And we are still battling and plugging leaks."

Interspersing his speech with anecdotes, Director Lord told of the crusader whose contribution to conservation of the forests had been the slaying of a woodpecker, and inaugurating the Loyal Order of Woodpeckers. He asked each of the 546 persons on the government active payroll to become a member of the order, filling the membership requirement by "tapping away at waste." If each employee saves but one dollar by economy, he declared, "the humble woodpecker will be given a place in history as a symbol of a great national thrift crusade."

A saving of more than $18,000,000 was effected, General Lord said, through allowing two or more percent of vacancies in various offices to remain vacant.

DIXON TALENT TO BE SEEN IN FINE PRODUCTION SOON

"Smiles-Home Town Follies" to be Given by St. Agnes Guild

Local stars are to shine in one of the most brilliant "home talent" theatrical affairs seen in Dixon in many a day, according to George M. Hall, author and producer of plays, protegee and assistant of Donald MacDonald 111, producer of the Junior League "Follies" in Chicago, who has been engaged to stage with Dixon talent his musical extravaganza "Smiles," "Home town Follies" in the Dixon Theatre, one night only, Thursday, June 30th.

The production will be launched as a community affair, under the auspices of St. Agnes Guild, of St. Luke's Church, of which the Rev. Fr. Story is Rector. The Dixon cast will be composed of 350 Dixon adults and children.

Director Hall comes highly recommended as a successful producer of "Home Talent" affairs. Performances of his "Smiles" spectacle have been given from coast to coast, as well as in Canada and Alaska. Southern Illinois cities that he has visited are enthusiastic in their praise of him and his work. He recently completed a tour of Florida and the southern states, producing plays with marked success.

The Production
"Smiles" is a musical extravaganza, presented in three parts with eight scenes. It is built very much on the plan of the New York World Garden Show, without a plot, but with a theme which speaks of "Love-Life-Youth."

Songs, dances, comedy, pantomime, spectacular scenic and light effects. A bit of "jazz" in striking contrast to more serious thought expressed in scenes exceedingly artistic, classic, full of rhythms and poetry. The perfect blending and harmony of the production, in which so many things from the "jazz" to the classic are used, all go to make "Smiles." Quoting the Yakkima, Washington, Herald: "Far above the average home talent."

The Producer

Director George M. Hall is a teacher of fancy dancing, dramatic art, expression, interpretative and classic dancing, and all who come under his direction are certain to profit in one way or another.

His work is of a highly educational, social and inspirational merit, and in presenting the producer and his work to Dixon the promoters of "Smiles" sincerely believe they are providing for the community an enterprise that will prove valuable to the civic life in many ways.

Through the courtesy of Howell & Page, Downing hall has been donated for all rehearsals. The children will meet this afternoon at 3:30. (All talented children of the community are invited to participate in the production) and the first rehearsal for the adults will be conducted this evening at 7:30 p. m., when members of the cast will meet the director and learn of the work.

All talented people are invited to arrange for tryouts. Phone Mrs. Robert Sterling. The age limit is 3 to 97 years—possibilities for all.

Chairmen
Mrs. John Ralston and Mrs. Douglas Harvey are the executive chairwomen for the affair, and with their devotion to duty and responsibility, and with the co-operation of the members of the guild the success of the "Follies" is assured. Everyone will seem to be going, everyone will be there—if the "pep" of the meeting of committees at a buffet supper at Mrs. Harvey's Saturday evening is a criterion.

Patronesses
Patronesses of the production are: Madamess A. W. Chandler, Charles A. Todd, Horace G. Reynolds, Charles B. Morrison, Eustace E. Shaw, Carlton B. Story, J. M. McCleary, L. M. Dement, C. J. Hoshack, E. N. Howell, J. M. Batchelder, Cal Butterfield, W. C. Durkes, George Campbell, Louis Pitcher, William Cahill, O. I. Martin, H. A. Roe, L. G. Rorer, J. H. Howell and J. F. Emerson, and Misses Caroline and Bess Eells and A. L. Gelsenheimer.

NEWS of the CHURCHES

ELDENA EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Although meeting with many obstacles during the moving and remodeling of the church building, yet the weather was surely ideal for the program Sunday, June 5th, when the dedication services were completed.

The preliminary services began Friday evening, June 3rd, and owing to a train wreck Rev. Ora Davis of Anna, Illinois, was not able to be present, and in his place Rev. F. Brandellner of the Evangelical church of Dixon very ably delivered the first sermon in the new church building. Rev. Brandellner also brought a message in song.

Saturday evening program was first the laying of the corner stone at which Bishop M. T. Maze officiated. Rev. Ora Davis, a former pastor, preached the sermon of the evening, and Mrs. Archie Kline and Mrs. A. W. Hartman sang a duet.

Sunday June 5th, was a full day, beginning with the Sunday School at 9:30 conducted by Supt. I. H. Moss-holder, and the lesson presented by Rev. Ora Davis.

Bishop M. T. Maze preached the sermon of the morning and Jimmie McLaughlin rendered a violin selection, and the Kingdom Male Quartet sang.

At 12:00 noon the basket dinner was served, which proved to be a very sumptuous affair.

At 2:00 p. m. the service opened with song service in charge of Rev. F. Brandellner and special numbers in song rendered by Betty Jean Moss-holder (two and one-half year old singer), Harold Heidenreich of Woodbine, Ill., and Robert Heidenreich of Alden, Kansas. Greetings were received from Rev. I. Divan of Woodbine, a former pastor of the charge, and in response to their names the following gave short but encouraging addresses: Rev. J. G. Eller, Presiding Elder of Freeport District, Rev. F. Brandellner of Dixon, Rev. J. Iwig of Reynolds, Rev. J. F. Van Evert of Ashton and Rev. Ora Davis of Anna. Bishop M. T. Maze then conducted the dedicatory service.

The evening service began at 7:30 with a song service in charge of Rev. J. F. Van Evert of Ashton, with a solo by Rev. Sitter of Franklin Grove, violin solo by Jimmie McLaughlin and a solo in song by Robert Heidenreich, with opening prayer by Rev. Farley of Sterling. Miss Emeline

Welsh, returned missionary from China gave the main address of the evening.

Added to the regular services was the song service of the personage lawn during the noon hour and also at the home of Edward Howard, who was unable to attend the dedication service on account of his illness. In these services the following took part: The Dixon Male Quartet, Madamess Leroy Glessner and Henry Shippert and Harold Heidenreich.

Added to the splendid service in program and the beautiful day, was the very encouraging collection for the day of over $124, besides a cash gift from the K. K. K. of over $122, and a total of cash and pledges for the church expenses of over $237.00.

This was surely encouraging when in face of a late season, and a rather depressed feeling in general among farmers, of which the community is largely composed, and only proves the more that the Lord finds ready contributors wherever and whenever needed.

The church looked very neat and cozy with the splendid decorating of the interior, and while the outside painting was not done, yet it is planned for and will undoubtedly be put on in the near future.

Many willing hands from the men and women of the Eldena Community have helped in donating of labor needed to finish the work thus far, the cash gifts and pledges have been appreciated and the donation of the church building by the people of Emanuel, has also been a God-send, and is very much appreciated by the people of Eldena.

The services came to a close Sunday evening, with the prayer and benediction by Rev. Ora Davis.

Rev. R. R. Heidenreich, Pastor.

Commerce in the Air

Arthur Brisbane, in the Chicago Herald and Examiner of May 18, says, "Standard Oil of Indiana announced yesterday the purchase from Henry and Edsel Ford of a huge, all-metal, three-engine monoplane 'to provide safe, fast and comfortable trips' for its officials to outlying oil regions."

"The time of a good oil man is worth more than the price of several airplanes."

"Perhaps Standard Oil will contribute to American flying on its own account, and build that 'real flying machine' which Henry Ford suggests."

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been, and is, contributing to American flying in the interest of the people whom it serves by the development of special gasoline and lubricating oil for aviation use and by its program of marking air trails.

This company is interested in commercial aviation. It has proved in its own business that the air is an extraordinarily satisfactory medium of communication.

The Air Mail has been a tremendous asset to the Standard Oil Company (Indiana), increasing the efficiency of the organization. Other business concerns and individuals throughout the United States have appreciated this speedier mail communication it makes possible, as the record for 1926 testifies. A total of 17,345,960 letters were carried by airplane during the year.

This Company's investment in a giant monoplane is further evidence that the Company is deeply interested in commercial aviation.

The new all-metal monoplane, named the Stanolind, can accommodate eight passengers, has a wing span of 71 feet, and is propelled by three motors. It uses 46 gallons of gasoline an hour and carries fuel for a sustained flight of five hours.

The Stanolind was purchased to provide safe, fast and comfortable transportation to oil producing regions, division headquarters and outlying refineries.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is always on the alert for new ways and better methods of increasing efficiency. The purchase of the new monoplane is in line with its progressive business policy.
